The importance of healthy air

We improve your health through air! A healthy lifestyle immediately makes you think of enough exercise and a healthy diet. But did you know that many health problems are related to poor air quality? On average, we spend 90% of our time indoors, where the air quality is up to five times worse than outdoors. Complaints such as fatigue, headaches, dry skin, colds and concentration problems are often due to poor indoor air quality. And when you consider that you breathe 20,000 times a day, it is indeed important to pay attention to air quality.
